Carson Honours UBC War Dead By Starting Gym

(By Canadian University Press.)

On the 12th of November the Hon. E. C. Carson, British Columbia Minister of Public Works turned the first sod on the site of UBC's proposed Memorial Gymnasium. This event culminated a student campaign that began in February, 1946, when it was learned that the government had made no provision for physical training facilities in its annual appropriation.

At that time students formed a committee and hired a professional manager, Penn McLeod to handle the campaign. The 1946 fall term drive in which students, campus saw the beginning of a tremendous clubs and societies, and faculty members took part.

Objective of $350,000

Proceeds from university functions, subscriptions from merchants in Vancouver, commissions from campus sales of Canadian Savings Bonds all were put into the fund in an endeavor to meet the Nov. 16 objective of $350,000. In October, 1946, 400 persons, mostly UBC graduates, pushed the campaign throughout 30 different districts of the province and newspapers gave solid support. Student parades and demonstrations, wide advertising and canvassers put the campaigning before a sympathetic public.

By Christmas, only $202,000 had been raised but the committee felt that this sum was sufficient to warrant further plans for the project. Professor Fredrick Lasserre, head of the new Architecture Department was appointed to draw up first designs.

Gym To Seat 7,000

The gym will seat 7,000, contain three basketball courts, facilities for squash, handball, boxing and wrestling. Plans will also include a rifle and archery range, a swimming pool and equipment for physiotherapy.

Though the original sum of $500,000 has not yet been fully subscribed, construction of the magnificent building will begin next year. After two years of hard work and heartbreaks, UBC students will be rewarded with one of Canada's finest gymnasiums, combining the best features of utility and memory of B.C.'s war dead.

Toronto Installs V. Massey As Chancellor; Honors Nine

(By Canadian University Press)

On Friday, November 24, the University of Toronto installed Vincent Massey as their new Chancellor. At the ceremony Mr. Massey conferred nine honorary degrees upon prominent public figures from Canada, the U.S., and Great Britain. Formal invitations were also sent to many universities, learned societies and foundations in these countries.

Procession

At the ceremony, which took place in Convocation Hall in Toronto, proceedings were started by a procession of university dignitaries and visitors. The Chancellor was then installed by the President after which he addressed the Convocation. Next the honorary graduates were presented to Mr. Massey who admitted them to the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, United Kingdom representative to the U.N.; Lord Beaverbrook, Chancellor of the University of New Brunswick and former member of Winston Churchill's cabinet; Lawrence Hunt, New York lawyer who urged U.S. entry into the war before Pearl Harbour; Helen Rogers Reid, president of the New York Herald-Tribune.

MOC to Hold Hayseed Hop This Saturday

The McGill Outing Club will hold its annual 'Hayseed Hop' on Saturday, November 29, in the Union Ballroom. This affair will have two orchestras playing the music. Chuck Leger for modern dancing, and the Corn Cobblers will supply music for the square dancing. Clothes, characteristic of the rural areas, will be the order of the day, and patched apparel will be prominent. Tickets, which are one dollar per couple, can be obtained from George in the Union Tuck Shop.

The highlight of the evening, it was reported, will be a grand march from which the couple having the most appropriate but unusual costumes will be presented with a prize. The novelty games and dances will then continue. Jack Crepeau, acting as master of ceremonies states that an unusual and entertaining evening is in order. Measurements of the girl-friend's waistline will be taken, and a price levied of one cent per inch.

The decorations committee, headed by Fay Rodriguez, are endeavoring to make the Ballroom have as much reminiscence of country life as possible, to fit in to the barn dance program.

Second Revue Aud.

The producers of the Red & White Revue will hold the second big audition of the year in the Union Ballroom tonight at 8 o'clock. All actors, singers, dancers, and musicians are requested to come down tonight to this audition. This is definitely the last chance for anyone interested in these aspects of the Revue to register.

It has also been announced that next week is to be the closing week for all scripts and skits as the producers feel that the show should be completed at the earliest possible date.

Council Urges Society Change Policy

Dawson Vets Name Three For Society

Three nominations for positions on the Dawson Student Veteran Society have been submitted since last Thursday. Mr. W. D. Hillard, secretary of the Students' Council, announced last night.

One nomination has been received for each of the three positions open. They are: Rocky Durocher for president; Hank Marcotte for vice-president; and George M. Riley for the position of secretary.

Bob Muskatov, vice-president of last year's executive, announced yesterday that there will be an extension of the final date set for nominations. The previous deadline was set for Wednesday.

Muskatov also pointed out that all vets on the campus are eligible for nomination, and that all vets may vote whether they have paid their twenty-five cent fee or not.

Dawson's vet population is now 60 per cent of the total students registered at the college and it is hoped that the decreasing vet population will not result in a proportionate decrease in electorate.

Meanwhile, nominations for the Dawson Key Society, which closed last Friday, have resulted in a vacancy in the faculty of Science, while Engineering registered two nominations too many.

George Mueller, in charge of nominations, has not as yet decided whether to hold elections, or whether to bring the nominees in by acclamation. The eight nominations which have been received include R. E. Henderson, George M. Stevens, John Logan, Basil A. Swan, A. G. MacDonald, George Piper, Clifton F. Jones and Clifford Cameron.

There are also two of last year's members, and the Engineering quota is eight members. However, the entire quota of 15 has not been reached. The situation is being considered at the present time, and a decision should be reached shortly.

ISS Bilingual Magazine Is Now Planned

Toronto, Nov. 24.—(CUP)—At the International Students Service Conference held at Ajax last week end, over fifty student and faculty delegates were present. The conference resulted in plans for a national bilingual magazine sponsored by the ISS and N.F.C.U.S.

Norwegian, Danish and Dutch student exchanges were planned for next summer. There will also be intensive study tours in Burma, India, Hungary, Roumania, Italy, Eastern France and Switzerland.

In February, the ISS will hold a campaign for the relief and rehabilitation of European and Asian students. The objective will be thirty thousand dollars for students abroad, and five thousand for emergency student relief in Canada.

Breakfast will be supplied to five hundred students at the University of Innsbruck, Austria for the three winter months, while there will be a contribution of books to the devastated libraries of the University of Lodz, Poland and supplies will be sent to Helsinki University. There will be a student hostel outfitted at Nanking University. It was resolved at the conference that no relief funds were to be used for other purposes.

At this time the president, A. R. Tremaine who will also chair the meeting, will outline the plans of the executive for the coming year.

The candidates for Arts and Science representative to the SEC will also be present to present their platforms to the student body. The duties of the various committees of the executive will be outlined, and their plans for the present session will be discussed. These committees include those on Education, Debating, Organization, and Social Life. The class representatives will also be on hand to answer any questions that may be put to them.

It has been announced that particular attention will be paid to the aims and program of the Educational Committee, which sponsors the 'Gen Nites'. It has been proposed that it form a 'Curriculum Committee' which will act as a funnel to forward student suggestions as to the improvement of courses to the various members of the faculty.

Plans for the New Year's Eve Party, which is to be held in the Union will be discussed, and the Treasurer, Paul Betts, will present his report.

Work on Betatron Begun At Prairie University

(By Canadian University Press)
(Special to The Daily)

A few weeks ago a caterpillar tractor began another of the many excavations which now dot the campus of the University of Saskatchewan. This excavation, however, had a special significance to all scientifically-minded persons in the province as it was the initial step in the construction of a nuclear physics laboratory, a building which when completed, will house a 22 million electron volt betatron, the first betatron to be installed in a Canadian institution.

Last year the Department of Physics at Saskatchewan decided to approach the Canadian Atomic Energy Control Commission for funds to be used for the purchase and installation of a betatron, and during the summer it was announced that the commission had approved an initial appropriation of $30,000. The department could hardly believe their good fortune as Queen's, McMaster and Toronto General Hospital had also applied.

High Energy Electrons

"Betatron" is the name given to a recently developed device for giving electrons extremely high energies. This high energy electron beam is then directed at a target and the subsequent bombardment produces a high energy X-ray beam. The machine now on order by Saskatchewan is rated at 22 MEV, but is expected to have a maximum output of 28 MEV. The largest deep X-ray outfit now in the province is a 400,000 volt machine.

The betatron, now on order, is expected to arrive at the university in the spring and hence work on the building will be continued throughout the winter. Dane T. Scag, the company's betatron expert, will personally direct the installation. The Allis-Chalmers Company built the first betatron under the direction of its inventor, Dr. D. W. Kerst, then of the University of Illinois.

The laboratory will be roughly

Junior Prom Tickets

On Thursday morning, Nov. 27, at 9 a.m., tickets for the Junior Prom will go on sale again. These tickets, which are limited in number, can be obtained at Mr. Fletcher's office in the Union. These tickets can be purchased only by Arts and Science Juniors, and will be sold only on the presentation of the yellow, third year, Undergraduate Society card.

Dr. Lachmann Will Address Hillel Meeting

In accordance with the United Jewish Student Appeal, November 24-December 6, at the McGill Hillel House, the program committee for the campaign has arranged a series of events to take place during the two weeks of the campaign here at McGill and at Dawson.

Dr. Richard F. Lachmann, Research Fellow at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, will address a meeting sponsored by the Zionist Committee in the subject of the Hebrew University, today, at 8:15 p.m. at Hillel House. Dr. Lachmann will also show a technicolor movie with a commentary by John B. Kennedy. Hillel has announced that this meeting will give the students the opportunity to obtain a comprehensive picture and account of the work being done at the Hebrew University.

Teacher, scholar, author, and publicist, Dr. Lachmann received his education on the continent. He is the author of a number of papers and publications on the history of civilization and the Arts.

At Dawson

Mr. H. M. Caiserman, general secretary of the Canadian Jewish Congress, will address the students at Dawson, today, in Room 24 of Dawson Hall, at 7:00 p.m. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

Mr. Caiserman has travelled extensively in post-war Europe, especially Poland and last summer spent several weeks in Palestine.

SEC to Propose Inclusion of Grads At Meeting Dec. 10

Constitutional Amendments Will Affect Fees, Quorum

Amendments to the constitution of the Students' Society affecting graduate students and undergraduates alike will be placed before the student body Dec. 10 when the Society holds its second meeting of the year in the Union Ballroom, it was announced last night.

Joyal Ponders Juncture With ISS and IUS

Marcel Joyal, in an interview with the Daily, stated that the National Federation of Canadian University Students has decided that the problem of whether to join the International Student Service and the International Union of Students is one of the most important that will face the annual conference this Christmas in Winnipeg.

"Many charges against these two organizations have been made," the chairman of the McGill Branch of N.F.C.U.S. went on to say, "but it is an undoubted fact that both have done a great deal in aiding students in Europe and Asia; in many cases they have been the only factors which have helped students to continue their studies since the end of the war."

In connection with the problem, the McGill Branch of N.F.C.U.S. has formed a committee under the chairmanship of Pat Black, Law II, to inquire into these organizations with a view to affiliation. Any student interested in helping on this committee is asked to attend a meeting to be held in the N.F.C.U.S. room, McGill Union, at 1 o'clock today.

Lower Quorum

The third main issue upon which students will be called to vote involves lowering the quorum from the present figure of 500. Lowering of the quorum, it is expected, will permit the Society to hold more official meetings.

Past experience has brought the problem to a head, S.E.C. sources said last night. The recent meeting on the question of cheerleaders had to be declared an unofficial meeting because of insufficient attendance and thus weakened the effectiveness of representation to university authorities.

There has been no indication of what figure will be suggested as the new quorum, but reliable sources hint that the reduction will not exceed 200.

Members of the Council are of the opinion that the proposed changes will increase the efficiency of the student governing body, and as such, are of vital concern to every student. The present quorum of 500 students, however, suggests the amendments cannot be effected unless there is a peak attendance at the forthcoming meeting.

It is expected, however, that interest will run high among the student body.

Dawson Holds Bovey Shield Preliminaries

Dawson College and McGill debaters will hold their preliminary eliminations in the contest for the Bovey Shield this week. The Shield is awarded for impromptu public-speaking.

Dawson eliminations are scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight in Room 12 at Dawson Hall. The assigned topic is: "Is Canada's Immigration Policy Satisfactory?"

McGill debaters are slated to contest their half of the Shield Friday at 5 p.m. in the New Room of the Union. The topic has not been announced as yet.

Final contest to determine the winner between Dawson and McGill will be held the following Friday, Dec. 5, at the latter college. For the McGill preliminaries, all first or second year students spending their first year here are permitted to enter.

The Bovey Shield, which is held for a term of one year, was presented for impromptu public-speaking, and contestants are assigned a topic on the morning of the scheduled match.

RHENA and GEORGE ROBERTSON, well-known husband and wife team in Canadian radio writing, acting and production, who will produce "My Client Curley"—the campus Radio Workshop's first recording of the season. Benefitting by the Robertsons' direction and experience will be an unusually large cast of 19 students, 18 of them making their Workshop debut.

Campus Radio Workshop To Record Corwin Play

"My Client Curley"—a half-hour play by Norman Corwin—will be the initial effort of the campus Radio Workshop to be recorded this season, it was announced last night. Rhena and George Robertson, well-known husband and wife team in Canadian radio, are in charge of production.

Large Cast

Following Workshop policy of training interested beginners in radio work, this particular play was selected in order that a large number of the many who auditioned this year might take part. Of the 19 roles cast, 18 are portrayed by newcomers to the group.

Instruction and direction from the Robertsons is also in line with a new policy of the Workshop—that of requesting competent professionals to donate of their time and talent in order that members may receive the best of training. Earlier this season, the Workshop sponsored a "School of Radio" featuring 10 outstanding radio personalities, each discussing his or her particular branch in the field.

INTERNATIONAL UNDERSTANDING: A BASIS

One of the more important problems facing the local committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students is that concerning possible affiliation with the International Union of Students—the world-wide body of students.

This item calls for much careful thought and consideration; and students at large must be encouraged to ponder the problem objectively and with a clear mind.

In general terms, the I.U.S. is an organization of student organizations; in other words, it is the conglomerate of national student groups. Its aims, stated briefly, are centered about the principle of promoting international understanding and good-will among students of the world; it purports too, to safeguard the interests of students wherever they may live.

The Daily has previously put forward the thesis that international co-operation and mutual understanding are the two essentials which are required for the maintenance of peace in our day.

Past editorials have also held that the discordant notes and fundamental disagreements heard about the conference tables of the United Nations need not be repeated in the conference rooms of international youth and student organizations.

In support of this contention, we point to the basic differences in function between the statesman and the student. The former are led by necessity to put forward the expressed wishes of their governments or parties. Statesmen then, representing as they do opposing attitudes and ideologies, must bear the fruit of incompatibility—discord.

Students, however, are not duty-bound in this respect; they are in the process of being educated; generally, they possess no cut and dried dogmas. Seated about the conference tables, engaged in discussion, students are not honor-bound to promote the interests of any particular parties or groups. There can thus be some basis upon which to maintain an international organization which will operate constructively, even during these antithetical days.

But at the same time, there must be awareness. For affiliation with any international organization—including the I.U.S.—implies the acceptance of a constitution and a body of ideas—ideas whose interpretations might differ widely from those of the subsidiary bodies.

In the case of the organization in question, there have been reports published by returned conference delegates that the I.U.S. is, in a sense, not representative; that it is dominated by leftists. This may be true, but it must not lead to the conclusion that affiliation is an impossibility.

For to do so is to defeat the principle of internationalism. Once having accepted the precepts of co-operation and understanding among the students of the world, we are inevitably committed to lend ourselves to the task of making this a reality; we are promised to aid in its construction, to impart, if possible, our own attitudes and opinions, thus influencing its growth and effectiveness.

Affiliation then, is possible. But this affiliation must be entered into with the intention of making the organization a fully representative one; and this positive attitude will enable the organization to fulfill its main aims all the more effectively.

As it stands today, the framework of an international organization of students exists with member groups from countries which are by no means communist in either purpose or intent. Any consideration of affiliation on our part must be in the spirit of asserting our attitudes and ideas, and at the same time understanding the ideas of the other member groups.

For in the final analysis, any organization which purports to promote international understanding must at least have understanding among its own members. And this can be achieved.—A.T.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ticket-sales

Mr. G. H. Fletcher,
 Secretary Treasurer
 Students' Executive Council.

Dear Mr. Fletcher:
 I am instructed by the Dawson College Students' Council to ask you for the co-operation of the McGill Students' Executive Council in the matter of tickets for social events. The Dawson College Students' Council feel that tickets for social events held at McGill should be available to Dawson students at Dawson, at a pro rata basis, and that these tickets should be placed on sale at Dawson, at the same time as they are placed on sale at McGill.

Your co-operation in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

Yours very truly,

W. D. HILLIARD,

Secretary Treasurer,

per M. Sears,
 The Students' Executive Council and the Students' Athletics Council wholeheartedly approve of the suggestion contained in the above letter and would request that all clubs, societies, and teams selling tickets would give consideration to this request of the Dawson College Students' Council as outlined in their letter.—Ed.

Impatience

McGill Daily.
 Dear Editor:
 I suppose that I should mention, before beginning, something appropriate concerning the wedding of the late Princess Elizabeth, but I do not wish to introduce any red herrings into the subject on which I am about to expound vehemently. I address this to you simply because I have no one else to whom I can turn, so please do not take this personally.

I have a nebulous memory of a February night this year, when a fellow-student, adorned with red and white ribbons, disturbed the privacy of our cozy ten-man cell here at Dawson, equipped with pen and cheque-book, and, bent on making us forfeit four dollars and fifty-three cents ($4.53), for a copy of Old McGill '47, which, he assured us, would be published at the beginning of the summer. We poor benighted Dawson students recognized in this, an opportunity to cherish forever, an album (bound in red leather) depicting the more intimate moments of our life at Dawson and McGill, and, in keeping with this beautiful thought, came across with the $4.53.

This vision, Mr. Editor, has been brutally shattered. June, July and then August passed, and still no "Old McGill '47" appeared. This, we put down to a delay in printing. Then, September and October went by, and now, in the middle of November, the three McGill Martlets have not yet so much as shown a little red feather.

Now, although you could trace, with a little effort, my ancestry back to the highlands of Scotland, and draw your own conclusions as to my relation with currency, I assure you that this has not influenced my concern for my $4.53.

It may not have occurred to anyone connected with the editorial staff of "Old McGill '47" that when a purchaser has to wait over eight

Savaria Recital At the Plateau

An interesting study in artistic self-expression was offered last Friday afternoon in a piano recital given by Georges Savaria for a teen-age audience in Plateau Hall. Beethoven's Appassionata Sonata, which opened the concert, is deeply emotional in content and was well done, but suffered somewhat from the player's emotional restraint—it needed the deep calm of the slow movement to show Mr. Savaria's good balance to advantage. Perhaps, too, the shy artist's restraint on first contact with his audience was a too-inhibiting factor. Chopin's Fantaisie, and the Second Scherzo, on the other hand, were very well played although again a trifle restrained, except in the building up of climaxes when there was a slight tendency to bang, particularly with the left hand. It was in these Chopin selections that Mr. Savaria showed his emotional depth, in the sensitive way in which he achieved transitions of mood. In the well-balanced shading of crescendos and diminuendos and by his fine phrasing.

Two Gershwin Preludes were performed with the sonority but not with all the fire of Gershwin. Again there was some too-loud playing in the base and some too-liberal use of the sustaining-loud pedal. Mr. Savaria's own Etude Poetique, which concluded the program, fell very pleasantly on the ear and expressed completely his emotional restraint and sensitive perception.

On the whole the performance was quite good, with fine and appropriately delicate playing in the treble, only slightly overshadowed on occasion by an over-emphasized bass and an over-use of the pedal, which favors the bass at the expense of the treble.

As a final thought, we wish something could be done about the Plateau piano, which seems to have had a totally unnecessary heat treatment.

Shoestring Boot Well Laced

"Riders To The Sea." John Millington Synge's one actor, was produced yesterday afternoon by Shoestring Theatre, in the Union Ballroom, under the direction of Allan Portugal.

The stage was built and illuminated on the ballroom floor, which is certainly barren of all helpful facilities. One reflects on the old maxim that necessity is the mother . . . in this case, of an effective and colorful setting for the Irish play. Costumes and make-up were excellent.

Briefly, in the words of actor-director, Allan Portugal, Riders to the Sea is about "a family on one of the Aran Islands, off the west coast of Ireland. All the men folk have drowned at sea, but at the last, their women are brought to accept the fact that it is the way of a young man to be going down to the sea, and all we can ask of this life is a strong coffin and a deep grave."

Pauline Ramsey, as Murry, the old woman whose family has drowned, played in the musical mood of the play with sensitivity. Even when her words were difficult to understand, the mood with which she infused her role spoke for her. Patricia Orange and Marjorie Baker, as her daughters, Kathleen and Nora, sustained their roles well. George Kent was physically impressive as her son, but played his part somewhat stiffly.

We look forward to the future productions of the Shoestring Theatre.

CHRISTMAS ISSUE

The Daily Christmas contest this year is open for photographs of Christmas scenes, or snapshots having a winter tang, as well as for the usual short story entries. A prize of $10.00 dollars will be awarded the winner in each section.

The story entries should not exceed 1,000 words, and all contributions must be typed, double spaced, and signed with the author's name and faculty. Anonymity will be respected if desired. The prize winning story and photo, as well as two "honorable mention" snaps, will be published in the Christmas issue.

The Christmas Daily is traditionally a Feature department publication. All undergraduate students at McGill may enter the contest, except those who belong to the Daily staff. The deadline for entries is December 12. All contributions should be addressed to the Feature Editor, and left with George in the Union Tuck Shop.

Elman Plays Tonight

Mischa Elman, world famous violin virtuoso, will be heard in recital tonight at Plateau Hall. Mr. Elman, who is in Montreal under the sponsorship of the Casavant Society, will present a varied programme of music by Bach, Brahms, Spohr, Debussy, Saint-Saens, and Paganini. Wolfgang Rose will be at the piano.

MISCHA ELMAN

Of special interest to McGill students is the fact that a limited number of tickets will be available at the box office at a one-third reduction in price. Students must have positive proof that they attend McGill.

oxolux and soap flakes

by Sy Yasin

Every day at 3.15 p.m. the average housewife drops her dreary household chores, dries her dishpan - red hands against a tattle-tale grey towel, gags little Jimmy and locks him in a closet, then with a sigh of relief sits down in the solitude and peace of her own home to share in the troubles of Radio's unhappiest woman, Maggie Morelove.

Students, however, cannot follow the sobby details of this great drama of life due to conflicting lectures, the demands of studies, etc. It is therefore the purpose of this article to relate to you what has happened recently in this heartrending soapy tragedy.

At the present moment Maggie has recovered from her semi-annual illness (in which she hovers between life and death). The illness, however, serves the useful purpose of making firm friends out of Jack Breeches and Jim Cuslink, Maggie's eighth husband and lover respectively, who prior to her confinement were bitter enemies. Unfortunately our heroine was preparing for a divorce . . . again, so that she might marry Dr. Meads who cared for her during her sickness (when she hovered between life and death).

In the meantime little Oscar (Maggie's son by her second husband) has taken to selling newspapers to keep starvation from the door. Not acquainted with the complexities of this cruel world the youngster made the error of crossing an intersection on a green light. The inevitable happened and little Oscar was horribly splattered all over the street by a 12 ton truck.

The news of the collision reaches Peter Glug (Oscar's Father) while he is relaxing in a Bowery Night-club and he is so upset that he lets his bottle of gin slip from his hand and staggers blind with grief in the general direction of the Hospital where little Oscar lies (hovering between life and death).

At the hospital another unfortunate accident occurs . . . again. As Glug is staggering towards little Oscar's bed, he pauses to admire a blond nurse, loses his balance and tumbles down three floors of slippery hospital stairs. Peter is hospitalized . . . hovering between life and death.

Meanwhile our Maggie has abandoned her plans for divorce, so that she might run off with her lawyer when she hears of Peter's unfortunate tumble. Without pausing to reflect the brave little woman decides to return to Peter, "the only man I really ever loved."

Her reunion with Glug remains one of the most tender scenes ever aired. A copy of the Script is reproduced below through the courtesy of Snoot and Snott Radio Writers (??), New York City.

She: Darling I have decided to come back to you, I've always loved you and I want to come back to you. Will you have me back? Please say yes . . . please . . . yes?

He: Yes!

She: I'm so glad darling, we'll build a new life together . . . a new . . . a glorious . . . a wonderful life . . . just you and I.

He: Yes!

She: Put the bottle down Darling . . . kiss me . . . will you?

He: Yes! Pass the Sen-Sen.

Complications will soon arise in Maggie's new life. For the present however, all is VEL in the household of Maggie Morelove.

"Our top intercollegiate crew is going to play the remainder of our scheduled Senior Montreal Basketball League games," it was revealed last night by head coach Howie Ryan. The surprise announcement came following McGill's 72-36 defeat at the hands of the YMHA squad in last week's opening league fixture, at which time the intercollegiate "seconds" comprised the Red and White roster.

"The move came," it was further stated, "following discussions with MBL mentor Ron Rutherford, and it was necessitated by objections raised by league officials." The MBL Executive voiced a strong disapproval of the entry of the "seconds" and suggested that the senior intercollegiate entry be placed in the league, for the sake of not lowering loop standards. The MBL started the season with four entries, YMHA, Central Y, 37th Regiment Gunners, and McGill, and this latest move reaffirms the group's stand of attempting to maintain highest possible basketball standards in Montreal.

INTERMEDIATE "A" ENTRY

The former league entry is to be placed in Intermediate "A" ranks, and will remain under the tutelage of coach Ron Rutherford. McGill will still have four teams and its farm system will include entries in the Intermediate "A" and Junior sections of the Montreal Basketball League, as well as a quintet in the Intermediate Intercollegiate loop.

The new senior squad is to see action tomorrow night at the Currie Gym, when the Redmen face the 37th Regiment Gunners. The intercollegiate squad will present the figures of George "Deadeye" Davidson, who potted 42 markers in two earlier MBL exhibition encounters, Bobby Duford, "Bud" Fraser, 6' 4" guard; Sam Roth, Charlie Goldbloom, last year's Dawson MBL mentor, while three other members from the Intermediate "A" loop are to be promoted for the fixture.

From now on, that Senior MBL crew is going to be a tough nut to crack!

Dance in Gym Will Follow Hockey Game

After the hockey game this Friday an "Ice Frollic" wance will be held by the Red and White Society in Sir Arthur Currie Gym. Dancing will start at 10:30 p.m. and end at 1:30 a.m. Arrangements have been made to provide buses from the Forum to the Gym. The admission charge is 50 cents per person, stag or drag. It has been announced that tickets will be on sale at the Union Tuck Shop today.

Stash Stanway's orchestra will supply the music, while the feature of the program will be a Barber Shop Quartette competition. The winners of this contest will receive prizes.

Water Poloists Seek to Topple Schubert Squad

McGill's junior water-polo entry seek their seventh straight victory tonight as they meet the Schubert 19th team in the latter's pool at 8:30 p.m. The squad must win the game to keep pace with the league leading YMCA Reds.

The Schubert squad are expected to put up a stiff battle. The unbeaten YMCA team were forced to the limit last week against the same squad, and just managed to eke out an 8-6 victory. Most of Byng and YMHA junior teams.

STARRY SQUAD

Jete Cameron, Bob Berry and Bill Osterman will be on the defence in front of Goalie Grey Austin. This McGill trio has given Austin air-tight protection during the last two games, as Austin racked up two successive shutouts.

Don Walter, Male Macdonald and the players are graduates of Baron Jim Ross will start off as the attacking trio, and will be alternated with Mike Languedoc, and Hal Corrigan. The McGill squad may be slightly handicapped in the large pool, as the overall length is 20 feet longer than the MAAA.

Intermediate Puck Loop Set With Three Ottawa Squads

It seems that Tommy Gorman, general manager of the Ottawa Auditorium, has temporarily put a damper on Intermediate Intercollegiate Hockey at the Auditorium. Gorman has cancelled the scheduled games between the McGill Redmen and the three Ottawa clubs in the Intercollegiate loop. The tilts were to take place sometime in early December. However, the Red and White will inaugurate their 47-48 season on Dec. 18th at the Gorman Ice Palace, when they meet the puck-chasing brigade from Carleton College.

The Intermediate Intercollegiate hockey set-up is now complete and the boys are ready for action. The Bytown schools in the circuit are St. Pats, Ottawa University and Carleton College, Loyola and McGill round out the league.

BYTOWN BRIGADE

The pucksters performing for the Capital City teams are really rarin' to go. However, they have long been searching in vain for a rink, the Auditorium not being available. In fact the Bytowners are so anxious to practice that they have kept their respective gyms in use. At present they are busy trying to secure playing accommodations in the district of Hull, Arnprior.

As for our own Intermediate-Redmen, coach Ross Hutchins has a host of talent at his disposal. Returning from last year's squad are such stalwarts as Tommy Bridel, Jo-Jo Smythe, Johnny Meagher (pronounced Ma-har), all of football fame, Read, O'Toole, Malone and Kimberly.

MORE GRIDDERS

Newcomers to the team include more pigskin standouts in Don Bussiere and "Rocky" Robillard. The other "rooks" are Lafontaine and Herb Kert. Last year Kert was the net-minder for the Junior Royals in the J.A.H.A. He proved himself a very fine guardian of the cage, in the Junior loop. There were times, however, when Herb complained of a sunburn, on the back of his neck. This resulted when the "Whiz Kids" of the Nationale team got hot and flashed the red light behind him just a little too much.

Hutchins' charges should make their presence felt in the Intercollegiate circuit this year. If things don't turn out so well during the campaign in the puck pastime, all those star gridmen in the line-up might challenge their opponents to a nice gentle game of football. Wouldn't that be something?

Last night the regular intramural softball schedule ended when Science III defaulted to Engineers III in the opener and Dents I defaulted to Arts and Science 3 & 4 in the nightcap.

The final standings are as follows, with the first team in each section in the playoffs:

Team	Section 1	W	L	Pts
Arts & Science 3 & 4		3	0	6
Phys. Ed. IV		2	1	4
Meds. I		1	2	2
Dents I		0	3	0

Team	Section 2	W	L	Pts
Dents II		3	0	6
Meds. II		2	1	4
Phys. Ed. III		1	2	2
Law II		0	3	0

Team	Section 3	W	L	Pts
Engineers III		2	0	4
Phys. Ed. I		0	1	0
Science III		0	1	0

Due to the fact that Engineers won both their games, the Phys. Eds-Science game is cancelled. The play-offs (a round robin series) is to start this Friday when Engineers III play Dents II at 5:15 p.m. The final two games will be played Monday, November 31, when Arts & Science 3 & 4, Engineers III at 5:15 p.m. and Dents II at 6:00 p.m.

By virtue of their 4 to 3 win over the McGill Redmen at the Verdun Auditorium on Saturday night, the University of Montreal Carabins broke a jinx that has been plaguing them for almost twenty years. On the night of February 13, 1928, the Blue and Gold gained a 5-4 decision over the Redmen. It took them nineteen years and nine months to repeat and this time also by a one goal margin.

The history of the intermediary period shows an unbroken string of McGill successes, marred only by a 3-all draw last spring. During this season the Red and White racked up a grand total of eighty-seven goals to their opponents thirty-one. This works out to an average game output of 6.7 tallies per contest which is usually enough to win any hockey game.

Worst drubbing handed the Flying Frenchmen during this thirteen game streak, was the 15 to 5 affair of February 27, 1939. Two of the tilts were one point decisions while the only shutouts of the series were won by 6 to 0 and 2 to 0 scores, these in 1937 and 1938. These clubs did not meet during the war and only twice between 1929 and 1936. This accounts for the fact that there were only thirteen games in the twenty year span, with five of these in the post-war schedule.

THE FAMINE

Despite the preponderance of McGill victories, this past duodecade, the situation was not always thus. As a matter of fact, prior to the start of their string, it was the Redmen who went hungry while Les Carabins waxed fat on the fruits of their successful efforts. From their inauguration into the Intercollegiate loop in 1922 to the aforementioned date in 1938, the Flying Frenchmen triumphed in seven out of the nine games between the two clubs, with the Redmen winning one and the other ending in a 4 all stalemate.

All in all, these two intense rivals have met on no less than twenty-two occasions. The Redmen have won ten, two have ended in draws, with the Carabins taking the other eight. One hundred and seventeen pucks have been pumped past the U. of M. netminders while the Red goalies have had a much better record with only seventy-seven to their debit. The latter have two shutouts on the record books to their credit, but the Redmen have never been horse-collared by their opponents.

This compilation of statistics and averages adds up to very little where the present setup is concerned, as games are not won on what the team did previously, but only on their performance of the moment. The Redmen and Les Carabins will meet on three more occasions this season, with every clash sure to be of the aggressive, hard fought variety. If Saturday's episode is any criterion.

PALMS TO THE REFS

It is very seldom that officials get anything other than censure, but we think that referees Ken Mullins and Leo Murray deserve an accolade for their handling of the game on Saturday. Previous experience had shown them that feeling sometimes runs very high between the colleges, and profiting by this they set about to make sure that everything was kept under control. To the onlooker, it might have looked as if the arbiters were being undeservedly strict in some cases, but had they let these little incidents go by, repercussions might have been serious. As it was, there was one fight, which is just about par for the course these days.

The penalty total tells the tale in this respect. These, by periods, were eleven, four, two and one which about reverses the usual trend as tempers cooled off rather than heated up as the game went on. Except for a brief lull in the final session, all banishments were for the minimum sentence.

DAVE CAMPBELL
Time on his hands

In contrast to the efficient handling of this contest, was the performance of the referees in Kingston the previous night. From all accounts, the contest got completely out of hand which resulted in a general donnybrook in the third period. To top it off, one of the Gaels' worst offenders escaped completely due to some clever managing by Coach Gene Chouinard and the arbiters oversight.

RED RAMBLING

Coach Dave Campbell was much perturbed by the way the timing was being mishandled and sent Red manager Jack Steeves over to look after the McGill interests. At one time there were so many in the penalty box that the timers got all confused. On another occasion Cy Biegler overstayed his time in the pokie because he wasn't told when to leave. This situation will have to be remedied if the Intercollegiate wants to take on more than a small time atmosphere...

Big Mike Fischer missed Saturday's game due a charley horse picked up in Kingston, but was a spectator accompanied by Michael Jr. Mike would have been a useful addition on the ice. His defence-mate, Sandy Sanderson, played a bangup game on both the rearguard and up front, where he was placed to replace the ailing Ward Pitfield. Captain Cy Biegler has found his scoring eye and hit the mark four times over the week-end. Cy has a bullet drive but has a little trouble controlling it. Any one of a number of Redmen had sure goals on their sticks, only to barely miss the corners. Both Tommy Hale and Warren Chippendale had this misfortune. Jack Millar also had an open net but just failed to lift the discover the fallen Lahale.

The ELECTRICAL WORKER

THE NICKEL WORKER

depend on each other

THE NICKEL REFINERY at Port Colborne is the second largest consumer of electric power in all Canada. Large blocks of power for Nickel mining and smelting in the Sudbury area are obtained from six different generating plants in Northern Ontario. Electrical supplies to the value of more than half a million dollars yearly are purchased by the Canadian Nickel industry.

And all through the electrical industry, Nickel and its alloys bring greater efficiency. In huge valves in hydro-electrical plants Nickel increases resistance to wear; in pole line hardware it gives strength; in heating elements Nickel is strong at high temperatures; in precision instruments Nickel provides special magnetic or non-magnetic properties.

So the Canadian Nickel worker produces the nickel needed by the electrical industry; the electrical worker generates the power and builds the electrical equipment required by the Nickel industry. Each and every industry in this country creates employment in other industries. No matter how we earn a living, we are all one family, depending on each other.

months for delivery of a paid article, he is liable to get impatient. That is exactly the impression I wish to convey. To put it bluntly, Mr. Editor, I am fed up and would like to see in The Daily some information concerning either my "Old McGill '47" or my Four Dollars and Fifty-three cents ($4.53).

I trust, Mr. Editor, that you will comply with this seemingly reasonable request.

Yours Sincerely,

A Massive Problem

The Editor, McGill Daily.

Dear Sir:

Word has reached me that the M.O.C. are throwing their annual Hayseed Hop this coming Saturday in the Union Ballroom. This rustic revelry interests me greatly as I once milked a cow and now consider myself an expert on country culture. The price to the aforementioned affair is one dollar per couple, which is very reasonable, but here is the rub. There is an additional charge of one cent per inch of the girl friend's waist.

Sir, I protest, as I fear that the lucky gentleman having the job of taking measurements may be too enthusiastic and get wrapped up in his work. Also this additional expense will cut into my pocket.

The truth is that my girl friend, far from being a threat to Miss America, would be a more likely candidate for the Miss London Balloon Barrage contest. Even if she is a veritable blimp, I love her truly but why should I be financially penalized for my taste in pulchritude?

Thereby hoping to save money, I make this appeal for some quick body reducing method. I have considered home surgery but have concluded that this is too messy a process. Will someone please heed this plea and take a load off my mind? ANXIOUS.

Cake—No Icing

The Editor, McGill Daily.

Sir:

With regard to the controversial letters you have published during the last week on the question of

D.V.A. entitlements, I cannot but agree with the instigator of the series, Mr. L. F. Lawry, in his letter of the 18th.

It is with amusement that I read the letters "Criticism" and "Disagreement" which followed on the 20th and fitted their authors very nicely into Mr. Lawry's classifications, "a mighty poor lot if not prepared to stand on our own feet to some extent at least."

The oft repeated phrases concerning our government grant, "on aid only in gaining a university education" and "a more extended grant than that allowed any other veteran group," seems to have gone entirely over the heads of some of their recipients.

I for one realize only too well that if it were not for our government's aid I would not be able to gain the benefits of a university education, and for that aid I am duly appreciative. My entire income is derived from my grant, my summer employment, and the necessary business of working three nights a week as a final supplement.

I'll admit that if the powers that be should see fit to allow an across-the-board increase in entitlements, I would be among the first to celebrate, but since that is to all intents and purposes out of the question, why sit around griping instead of seeing to it that that $60 a month is supplemented. "Frosting on our D.V.A. cake" is a drone's day dream.

Yours sincerely,

B. R. B.

'Follies' Script Disappears—Show Goes On

(By Canadian University Press.)

A serious predicament has confronted the social director of the Literary Society of University College, Toronto. The script for their show, "U.C. Follies" was stolen just a few days before the show was to be staged.

The Social Director Harvie Applebaum announced the theft and stated that this came as a shock, for it was the only script for this presentation.

No clues were left and he, and his co-star Al Goodman refused to make any accusations. They left the script on top of the piano in the Common Room, departed for supper, and upon their return they discovered that the scripts were missing.

Applebaum stated that the show would go on despite the fact that they were missing. To quote Mr. Applebaum, "Even though it was the original and only script of the show, it will not stop the show. I have it all in my head."

Al Goodman said that he would guard Applebaum's head with his life.

Student Parents Visit U. of M. For Fund Drive

(By Canadian University Press.)

Last Sunday afternoon, over 400 parents of Université de Montréal students visited the University. They were called there in connection with the campaign for eleven million dollars which is being staged by the University.

The visitors travelled through 6½ miles of corridors, and climbed to the eleventh floor after which they gathered in the Main Library, where cocktails were served. At this time, the Hon. Philip Brails, president of the campaign, made a speech. He acknowledged a few big subscriptions already received in U. de M.'s campaign for eleven million dollars.

Among these, the City of Montreal has subscribed two million dollars, and the City of Outremont 100,000 dollars. At the same time the speaker urged parents to send cheques for five dollars to the university every year for five years.

The money is to be used to build a Student's Union containing 400 rooms, a gymnasium, a swimming pool, theatre, bowling alley, dance hall, offices for members of the council, and a stadium with tennis courts, and a race track urgently needed by U. de M. students. A sum will also be used for the hospital with a capacity of 500 beds, to the public, in which medical students will be allowed to practice.

First A & S Class Debate Held; Lowe, Campbell Win

Yesterday at 1 o'clock in the music room of the Union, the first of this year's Arts & Science class debates was put on. The resolution on the floor was that "McGill University should award athletic scholarships."

Second year arts was in the affirmative, the two speakers being Nelson Lowe and Bruce Campbell. The negative was upheld by Art Mathewson and Lorne Hellyer.

The affirmative stressed the point that athletic scholarships could be controlled by the university and that by such control the stigma of professionals playing college football would be removed. Bruce Campbell also brought out the point that the ancient Greeks placed as much emphasis on the development of the body as of the mind.

Speaking for the negative, Art Mathewson showed that it was ridiculous for any institution for the advancement of learning such as McGill to take upon itself, as the resolution read, the duty of awarding remuneration for athletic prowess. He went on to attack the idea of giving a scholarship to an athlete on the same footing as to a student who received one for academic excellence. Lorne Hellyer, speaking second for the negative, stressed the point that the game should be played for the game's sake and not with the sole purpose of winning.

The judge of the debate complimented the negative on their presentation and clarity in the debate, explaining to the debaters of the need to explain to the audience the basis of their argument, for which he particularly complimented Art Mathewson. The judge ruled, however, that since the main point of the affirmative, that of the control of scholarships, was not attacked the victory be awarded to the affirmative.

Next Monday Arts 4 will oppose Arts 1 on the subject: "Resolved that Canada should adopt the B.B.C. system of broadcasting. All students are invited to attend the debates and Arts of Science debaters are especially asked to sign up with Harry Miller in order to have the debating league really flourish as it should.

CANADIAN CAMPUS

— a CUP feature

Everywhere it is the same. "We hate it, we hate it, but Janie's doing it, so why shouldn't I?"

If these will be the last words ever spoken about the New (?) Look, regrets will be few. But the New Look is here to stay—if Canadian camps are criteria for style.

In not even one campus has there been an organized rejection of the Look similar to the boycotting of New Lookers by male daters in several American camps. Representing a sociologist's triumph (to say nothing of Garment Row, New York City), Canadian girls are following the herd and adopting the fashions.

As one sociology professor put it recently, "The only real opposition to the New Look can come from time, which, however, maintains the peculiarity of changing sides." The sides have been taken and the winner declared.

At QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY, reaction has set in all the way from a woman Dean to light verse artists. Dean Douglas, stating first that "girls look much nicer when the hemline is not more than four inches below the knee," adds quite seriously that neglect of conditions in Europe because catering to the gold glint in a manufacturer's eye, is shameful. Writing in the Queen's Journal, D. E. laments: The girls are letting down their hems (A few there are who won't) And we aren't liking what we see, (Or rather, what we don't.)

Flying Club At U. of N.B. Plans for Year

(By Canadian University Press.)

University of New Brunswick's Flying Club is planning an active program for the coming season, it was learned from a report of the agenda of the club's next major meeting.

The group is investigating the possible alliance with the National Intercollegiate Flying Club, an American organization of 84 or more of the 100 college flying clubs in the U.S.A.

Also on the schedule for future meetings is a series of lectures on air regulations and airmanship. An absolute necessity to all persons intending to fly, the series will be presented by members of the present executive of the group and will later be summarized before flight.

Further points to be discussed at meetings are the requirements for the obtaining of licenses and the methods by which prospective pilots must follow to do so. In addition the club plans to design a distinctive crest which will be worn by club members.

Dawson MBL Entry Loses 44-24 to Y

(Special to The Daily)

Dawson's Intermediate MBL entry lost their second league game of the season by a 44 to 24 score to the powerful NDG YMCA basketball squad in Dawson College Gym last night.

It was NDG all the way in the first half as the Montreal crew outscored and outplayed the home team 21 to 10, opening the scoring from the first whistle and leading by at least five points for most of the half. Dawson's wavering defence was able to hinder only slightly the flashy visitors' attack. On the other hand Dawson's passing was weak and lacked final drive when they were in on the breaks. The Y team was full of confidence and, lead by McKeene with 8 points to his credit in the first half, made it certain that they were the team who were going to come out on top.

The play in the second half followed closely on the heels of the first, only more in the favor of the YMCA team. Resting on their lead in the first 12 minutes of the second half, the visitors just kept potting baskets every time the Dawsonites chanced to drop one through the hoop, keeping an even ten points ahead. Then in the final minutes of the game, the visitors, sparked by McKeene and Rollo, answered a fading Dawson rally with these two Y boys combining in a 14-point rush which ended the game.

Top scorers in the game were McKeene and Rollo, each bagging 16, and Pinard for the losers with 9 points. Jones was outstanding at guard for Dawson but his efforts looked feeble compared to the flashy game played by the NDG aggregation.

LETTER FORUM

Dear Sir:

Reading G. C. Gosselin's article entitled "Communist Loyalty" I felt the necessity of correcting some of his statements concerning the importance of Communism in the French underground. I would first suggest to Mr. Gosselin that before speaking of the French Resistance he should extend his readings to other books than the Sacrifice du Matin; Colonel Remys, Memoirs d'un Agent Secret, and Murt du Réseau, for instance. Then perhaps he would see that the part played by Communists in the Resistance was not a small one but a very large and active one.

One half of the French underground movement were Communists or communist controlled and most were noted for their daring and discipline. As to his statement that there were no Communists but only French patriots fighting the German invader, anybody having lived in France during the occupation would tell him that for many Communists the ideal they were fighting for was the Communist ideal much more than France. This was but a consequence of the Communist theories which place the allegiance of the party above that of the country.
